Making Agile Work For You

Note - answer in the response column with 1 of the 5 options listed

Agile Audit Questions by Agile Rant	Responses of "Very Often", "Often", "Maybe half the time", "Sometimes", "Rarely"
How often do you deploy software?
How often are new feature or functionality goals met in the sprint (80% or above)?
How often do you interact with stakeholders?
How often is work completed and it satisfies all user needs and goals?
How often do you interact with actual users of the software?
How often do you demo software to users and stakeholders?
How often is process adapted to better handle varied work?

How often do those creating new functions and software interact with users to clarify needs and wants?
How often are questions and discussions had in face to face (or phone calls) conversations?
How often do team members and stakeholders have impromptu discussions to answer questions on functionality (vs falling back on documentation) ?
How often are new requirements introduced and work is adjusted to still meet needs in the sprint?
How often do we check priority of work to ensure we are working the right things?
How often do team members discuss work and determine who will work what priority items?
How often is work reflected on after the fact, to determine what can be done better?
How often are changes implemented when team members find possible improvement items?
How often are team members allowed to try ideas for a solution?
How often is the team allowed time to innovate?
How often are team members allowed time for learning opportunities?

How often do conversations occur about scope of work, what is included vs what is not included, or what can be moved out to simplify work?
How often do team members feel they have input into the design, architecture, etc, of new systems and functionality?	